

Board of Directors Biographies

Juan Arteaga is a partner in the antitrust and white collar & regulatory enforcement groups in Crowell & Moring's New York office. His practice focuses primarily on advising companies, boards of directors and executives on a broad range of civil and criminal antitrust matters, including litigation, merger reviews, government and internal investigations, and counseling regarding various business practices. From 2013 to 2017, Mr. Arteaga was a senior official in the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Justice Dept. Serving as deputy assistant attorney general for civil enforcement, he worked on and oversaw investigations and litigation in various industries, including financial services, aviation, food and beverage, health care, technology, cable, manufactured products, transportation and telecommunications. He also served as chief of staff and senior counsel to the assistant attorney general for the Antitrust Division. Mr. Arteaga earned a bachelor's with honors in history and political science from Boston College, where he elected to Phi Beta Kappa and earned the Archbishop Oscar Romero Scholarship, and earned his law degree with honors from Columbia University Law School, where he served as managing editor of the Law Review and was a Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar. He is admitted to practice in New York and Connecticut, and is a member of the New York City Bar Assn., the American Bar Assn., the Hispanic National Bar Assn., and the Puerto Rican Bar Assn. He has received the New York Legal Aid Society's Outstanding Pro Publico Award in recognition of his pro bono representation of lawful immigrants in removal proceedings. He has received the Her Justice Commitment to Justice Award for his pro bono representation of indigent women in family court proceedings.

Evelyn Chumbow is a survivor of child labor trafficking turned anti-trafficking activist and public speaker. She has focused her life's work on ending modern slavery. Ms. Chumbow was brought to the U.S. from Cameroon at age 9 and forced to cook, clean and care for her trafficker's children. She was never paid for her work, and any hope that she might escape her miserable life was undermined by beatings she received from her trafficker. For seven years, she lived in constant fear, working day and night. Today, Ms. Chumbow works tirelessly to raise awareness and help other survivors. She serves as an adviser to human trafficking nonprofits and has been invited to brief government agencies about human trafficking from a survivor's perspective, including the Dept. of Homeland Security, the FBI and the Dept. of Justice. She was appointed by President Obama to the U.S. Advisory Council on Human Trafficking. Ms. Chumbow fulfilled a lifelong dream in 2015, graduating with a bachelor's in homeland security studies from the University of Maryland University College. She works as a project assistant at the law firm of Baker McKenzie in Washington.

Davina P. Durgana is an award-winning international human rights statistician with more than a decade of experience developing leading global models assessing risk and vulnerability to modern slavery. She is an American Statistical Association Statistical Advocate of the Year, Vice Chair of Statistics without Borders, and a Forbes Top 30 Under 30 in Science for 2017 for her work on statistical modeling, human security theory, and human trafficking. Dr. Durgana is an inaugural 2020-2022 Ambassador for the American Association for the Advancement of Science to motivate women and girls to pursue STEM careers. She is co-lead of the D.C. Forbes Under 30 Board. Dr. Durgana is affiliated faculty at National Defense University's College of International Security Affairs and Oxford University's Green Templeton College. Dr. Durgana was selected as a Google Fellow for Technology and Social Change for her work in human trafficking and technology. She was awarded the Trafficking in America Task Force Award for Service and was named a Disruption Awards Foundation Fellow for 2018. She serves on several expert groups for the United Nations, the Department of Justice and the National Science Foundation, and has authored more than 20 publications. In 2015 she received the University Award for Outstanding Scholarship at the Graduate Level from American University, where she received her Ph.D. in international relations with distinction. She received her master's degrees in Paris. France while studying human trafficking at the Sorbonne and the American University of Paris, and her bachelor's degree at George Washington University's Elliott School of International Affairs.

R. Wade Litchfield is vice president and general counsel for Florida Power & Light (FPL) in Palm Beach County, Florida, a subsidiary of NextEra Energy, Inc., one of the largest investor-owned electric utilities in the nation. He is responsible for all of FPL's legal matters. Before joining FPL, Mr. Litchfield was senior counsel for Entergy Corporation in New Orleans. Mr. Litchfield is a member of the New York and Louisiana bars and practices in Florida as authorized house counsel. A native of Alberta, Canada, Mr. Litchfield holds a bachelor's degree (cum laude) in in economics from Brigham Young University and earned his law degree from McGill University in Montreal, Canada. He received a master's degree in business administration from Tulane University. Mr. Litchfield is a member of Leadership Florida and has chaired FPL's Palm Beach County United Way campaign. He chaired An Evening of Hope: Florida Unites to End Human Trafficking, a 2016 educational event live-streamed to more than 35 Florida college campuses. He serves on the board of Volunteer Florida Foundation and as volunteer coordinator for JustServe.org in South Florida. He also serves on the leadership advisory council at Place of Hope in Palm Beach County and has served on the board of Bella's Angels, a nonprofit assisting families with CHARGE syndrome and other rare disorders. He has served in a voluntary ecclesiastical position as president of the Stuart Florida Stake for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Lila Leno is the treasurer of the board of directors. Dr. Leno is a principal at Calibre CPA Group PLCC in Bethesda, Maryland. She has decades of auditing and accounting experience, including work with nonprofit organizations and government entities. She specializes in organizations that receive federal and state government funding and has performed numerous compliance audits in accordance with Government Auditing Standards, prepared 990s, and solved issues pertaining to tax exemption. Dr. Leno earned a bachelor's in accounting and finance from the University of Tirana in her home country of Albania, then continued her studies to earn a law degree and doctorate in fiscal policy. After moving to the United States, she graduated from Sonoma State University with a bachelor's in accounting. Before joining Calibre CPA Group, she served in various audit and accounting positions at Squire Lemkin, McGladry & Pullen, Goodman & Company, among other firms, as director of finance at CORE International, and as a fiscal and legal policy expert for the Albania ministry of finance. Dr. Leno is a registered CPA in the state of Maryland and a member of the Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Carolyn Long is the vice chair of the board of directors. She retired in 2013 from a career as an international development specialist. She was vice president of two organizations, including InterAction, the largest coalition of U.S. NGOs working in international development and humanitarian assistance. She has three decades of NGO-related experience with a main focus on sub-Saharan Africa, and she has worked at all levels of development from the grassroots to the global level. Her work has focused on capacity strengthening, aid effectiveness, evaluation and a range of advocacy initiatives. She was an activist in the anti-apartheid campaign for 20 years. She has written extensively on the role of civil society organizations in development. She is the author of Participation of the Poor in Development Initiatives: Taking Their Rightful Place, and several published papers on civil society advocacy initiatives. She served on the boards of Africa Action and Volunteer: The National Center on Volunteerism. Her career began as a Peace Corps volunteer in Gabon, Equatorial Africa. She speaks fluent French.

Timothy Patrick McCarthy is the chair of the board of directors. An awardwinning scholar, educator, public servant, and human rights activist, he has taught on the faculty at Harvard University since 2005, where he is Core Faculty at the Carr Center for Human Rights Policy at the John F. Kennedy School of Government. The adopted only son and grandson of public school teachers and faculty workers, Dr. McCarthy is also the Stanley Paterson Professor of American History in the Boston Clemente Course, a college humanities course for low-income adults and co-recipient of the 2015 National Humanities Medal. Twice named one of Harvard Crimson's "Professors of the Year," he is the recipient of many awards for his commitment to students, including the 2019 Manuel C. Carballo Award for Excellence in Teaching, the Kennedy School's highest teaching honor. Dr. McCarthy is the author or editor of five books from the New Press, and a frequent media commentator whose work has been featured in Salon, Huffington Post, The Daily Beast, Pangyrus, The Nation, NPR, and several documentary films. In June 2019, he served as guest editor for The Nation's historic "Reclaiming Stonewall 50" forum. Shaped by the anti-apartheid and AIDS activism of his college years, he has devoted his life to public service and social justice. As founding director of Harvard's Alternative Spring Break Church Rebuilding Program, he spent fifteen years organizing hundreds of students to help rebuild black churches destroyed in racist arson attacks. A respected leader in the LGBTQ+ community, Dr. McCarthy was a founding member of Barack Obama's National LGBT Leadership Council, gave expert testimony to the Pentagon Comprehensive Working Group on the repeal of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell," and was a member of the first-ever LGBTQ delegation from the U.S. to Israel/Palestine. He currently hosts and directs The A.R.T. of Human Rights and Resistance Mic! through the Tony Award-winning American Repertory Theater, where he serves on the Board of Advisors. Dr. McCarthy graduated with honors in History and Literature from Harvard College and earned his M.A., M.Phil., and Ph.D. in History from Columbia University. (Twitter: @DrTPM)

Anesa "Nes" Parker is a senior manager in Deloitte's Government & Public Services Practice. During her consulting tenure, Ms. Parker has led engagements for government, nonprofit and philanthropic clients related to strategic transformation. She's served the European Commission, U.K. Home Office, World Economic Forum, United Nations, U.S. Departments of Homeland Security, State, Health and Human Services as well as Defense. Ms. Parker is passionate about applying Deloitte's capabilities and solutions to social causes such as anti-human trafficking, refugee response as well as gender and inclusion. Her work and commentary has been in the Wall Street Journal, US News and World Report, Business Insider, the Huffington Post, Public CIO, the Chronicle of Philanthropy, Governing Executive, Profiles in Diversity Journal, and Deloitte University Press. She has also spoken at, among other venues, SXSW, Washington Post Live and as a quest lecturer at Yale University, Georgetown University, George Mason University, and Columbia University. Ms. Parker graduated magna cum laude from Vassar College with a bachelor's in political science and economics, and earned a Master of Public Administration from Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs. She's a board member for BUILD DC and the Chamber of Commerce Human Trafficking Task Force, and resides in Washington, D.C. with her husband and their English Bulldog.

Karen Stauss is the secretary of the board of directors. She serves as senior policy counsel for the U.S. Department of Justice's Human Trafficking Prosecution Unit (HTPU). She works on legislative and executive branch policy proposals affecting the capacity of the unit and of U.S. Attorneys' Offices to prosecute trafficking, and supports building capacity among HTPU's enforcement partners. Ms. Stauss was previously the director of programs for Free the Slaves from 2010 to 2016, where she was responsible for overseeing the organization's policy advocacy work and its partnerships with community-based organizations in eight countries. She was managing attorney and policy counsel at Polaris Project, a national anti-trafficking organization, from 2006 to 2010. From 2003 to 2006, Ms. Stauss was an Africa researcher with Human Rights Watch, where she operated the field office in Democratic Republic of the Congo after holding a yearlong fellowship conducting human rights research in Nigeria. She investigated war crimes and other human rights abuses, conducted advocacy, and strengthened human rights group networks. Ms. Stauss holds a bachelor's from Duke University and her law degree from Columbia Law School. Karen is fluent in French and speaks basic Spanish and German. She is a lecturer at the Elliott School of International Affairs at George Washington University.

Amy Komoroski Wiwi is a partner at Lowenstein Sandler LLP in Roseland, New Jersey. Long fascinated by the complex relationships among members of the workforce, managers and their employees, Ms. Wiwi translates a passion for problem-solving into strategic counsel and effective dispute resolution. Praised by clients as very knowledgeable and objective - and praised as a superior strategist - she thrives on crafting creative solutions to the most intricate of employment problems. Ms. Wiwi counsels employers on the myriad issues they face related to hiring, disciplining and termination of employees; family and medical leaves; disability leaves and accommodations; compliance with antidiscrimination and anti-retaliation laws; and workforce reductions. She also drafts and negotiates executive employment and consulting agreements and corporate covenants. Her practice covers a wide range of litigation involving federal and state laws. Ms. Wiwi is admitted to the bar in New York and New Jersey. She earned a bachelor's of fine arts (cum laude) from the Syracuse University College of Visual and Performing Arts, and her law degree (cum laude) from Boston University. She is deeply committed to serving her local community. Ms. Wiwi sits on the Jersey Battered Women's Service board of directors, supporting its work against domestic violence by protecting and empowering victims, rehabilitating family members, advocating social reform to prevent partner violence, and educating the public.

Update: August 31, 2020